Abstract

A portable multi-display device includes at least two panel housings in which a variety of circuits and displays are mounted, the displays being designed adjacent to each other at their one side, and framework for fixing the displays to mount the displays into the panel housings, the framework being provided at its one side with a screen joint portion.

5